ed and so surprised, she added that she liked him better than any one else she knew-he might speak to papa, if he liked. Of course he did "speak to papa," who objected, on the score of Madge's youth, and Mr. Hinsdalo's lack of suitaapproved of any garment, he steers clear of that subject, or suggests in the mildest. most affectionate manner, that possibly the might look better in something else. Hut once married, nothing suits. He begoes at once to mention what he dislikes, and observes a discreet silence in regard to that portion of his wife's toilet which pieces him. I have no doubt that there are exceptions to this, as to every rule out the exceptions have never come unof terror on her face.

"I trust he will. If he shows any signs of consciousness before I return, send for me."
He hurried off. Madge clasped both hands to her head. With a low, smothered shrick, she cried out: "I said I wished I might never see him again." a quick-tempered person like Madee linstale there are lew things more dueband bestows on a costume which dues not suit him. So when Raymond commenced to laugh as he looked at the

"What is the matter with it?" "It is the ugliest thing I ever saw. I don't know what makes it look so." Then another roar of laughter.
"Don't six there and laugh like an idiot. If there is anything ridiculous about it I won't keep it; but you don't know anything about it, anyway."

wished I might never see him again."

Presently she started up, and hastened to the sick room, where she watched all might. Every breath which the patient drew was counted. Madge held one of his hands, and noticed every variation in the pulse. It grew perceptibly weaker toward morning. As a faint crimson light, the herald of God's new day, began to peep over the housetops, Itaymond Ilindsdale breathed his last. He siept his life quietly away. When the pomp and glory of the morning skies were ushering in the day, God called this human soul to Himself.

Never could Madge ask his fogiveness. You certainly have the most extraor-dinary taste, Madge. How did you ever decide to buy that?"
"If you will stop talking about it I will decide to buy that?"

"If you will stop talking about it I will be extremely obliged to you," cried that the extremely obliged to you," cried that words he had heard her utter; never would the sound of those cruel and throwing it on the floor.

Then she rushed out of the room and brain until she was almost mad; she saw her.

The next day she was folding up the jacket to send it back to the shop, and then and there they "made it up." Raymond promised her that when he disliked anything she wore, he would tell her so caimly, and not laugh at her saif she were a clown at a circus and enjoyed it. But can not say that they were very happy for the next few months, Madge, as I mentioned before, was quick-tempered, and in her anger said many cruel things, which she forgot the next moment. Her bushand, however, was not always able to forget her unkind speeches. His disposition was quite different from hers, and forgotten immediately, rankled in his mind for days. Lately, too, Magie imso sgined she had another cause for unhappiness. Raymond was a lawyer. He had taken a case for a very handsome widow, and Madge was foolish enough to be jealous, and committed the fatal mistake of letting her husband see her uneasiness. Strange, what a fascination there is in imagining ourselves unhappy. All this time I have left my young woman at the window. Shall I tell you some of the thoughts which are passing through her mind? They were some thing like this: I believe I am the most mind like this: I believe I am the most other as possible. Raymond is so cold and calm and deliberate, that merely for him to advance a proposition is enough for our popuse it, and when I contradict him, instead of answering me, he closes his mouth with that set look I defend to oppose it, and when I contradict him, instead of answering me, he closes his mouth with that set look I defend the service of the service of the service of the forgets it. I don't think he cares for me any more. Oh dear: He will never forget what I said this morning, even if he forgets it. I don't think he cares for me any more. It was about a new jacket that they had their first serious quarrel. Magestands they was as a health of health in the truth, thinking it all over, with rather an antione expression on the pretty face. She has black hair, a pair of bright, dark eyes, a per terfousse nore, and a lithe, active little figure. She is very pretty, and very young; everything in the room beto-kees comfort and luxury, why should the occupant be troubled?

This little woman was an only child. For nineteen years she had been petted and induged, until any girl with less character would have been ruined. Madge, fortunately, was girld with a large share of common senses, and she came out of the order of kied. Of course be did "speak to papa, it be door bell, and in walks her brother who believes, on the score of Matges youth, and Mr. Hinsalaic slack of suntable means to keep a wife.

"I am sure I am not anxious to go,"
I am sure I do not wish to have you.
This was all very childish, and Madge did not suspect she had said anything to hart her husband's feelings, but he was a nittle sore for a day or two, though, at the same time, he was harrily ashaned of himself for being so sensitive, and would at have had her know it for the world, she bought the garment at last, and putting it on one evening, asked Raymond to damire it.

Now, I have often observed that when man is engaged, or simply attentive to a wirl, he likes everything she wears; or, it we venture in his immeet heart to disapproved of any garment, he steres clear in the surface of the same time in his immeet heart to disapproved of any garment, he steres clear in the surface of the same time in his immeet heart to disapproved of any garment, he steres clear in the surface of the same time in his immeet heart to disapproved of any garment, he steres clear in the surface of the surface of the stere of the surface of the of a stended the great somechied has incited unseropulous parties to manufacture

Hepatitis or Liver Complaint, DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

PAIN in the right side, under the ptoms of a Diseased Liverredge of the ribs, increases on pres-ure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder-blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rhoumatism in the arm The stomach is affected with loss of apetite and sickness; the bowels in eneral are costive, sometimes alter-ative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a pain-ful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is some-times an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be bene-ficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try edy.
